Intellecty Announces Filing of Water Management Technology Patent

San Diego, CA - Jan 30 2019 Intellecty Inc, a company that develops and produces smart water technology solutions, today announced the filing of a U.S. patent application for its breakthrough findings that will improve the monitoring and measuring of water through a water pipe. Intellecty's smart water management system enables homeowners to know of any water leak in their home, remotely shut-off their water to stop wide spread damage and manage their water use to prevent surprisingly high water bills and save water.

Intellecty's technology adds another layer to the home protection sought by homeowners. The leak protection capabilities available with intellecty provides whole home leak protection. Homeowners who need to manage their water use are able to immediately know how much water is being used anywhere in their home inside and out. Using a single pipe mounted sensor, the technology can monitor all water used anywhere in the house. With this development, homeowners will be able to conserve water and easily catch wasteful habits and events.

"Over the past 2 years, we have been developing, testing and refining the technology to make sure it was ready and patentable. We also spent countless hours constructing this patent to protect one of our many major inventions," stated Johannes "Joost" Boerhout, Intellecty's CTO.
